Instructions

Ask some local workers to come in and talk to your group about their jobs, try and find people from a range of different job areas so participants can get a variety of perspectives on work.

Alternatively, leaders could have participants bring a family member or friend to the meeting to talk about the job they have.

Encourage the group to ask questions about the guest speakers work.

After they've met the workers, have them design their own perfect job, this could be a job that exists already or one they hope will exist in the future.

Debrief:

- ▶ What do you think 'good' work is?
- ▶ Why do you think some workplaces have bad conditions?
